BOTH PROMPTS: THE MORNING BRIEF + THE FOLLOW-UP LIST

Your own morning brief in normal Claude

Claude Duet's morning brief is a US-only waitlist for now. These two prompts give you that brief in normal Claude, from your Gmail and Google Calendar, today.

TESTED ON MY OWN INBOX · 22 OCT 2026

BEFORE YOU START

What you need

- Claude: the website claude.ai or the Claude app, in any supported country. No waitlist.
- The Gmail and Google Calendar connectors: turned on in Claude, connected to the same Google account.
- Claude Pro only if you want it to run on its own every morning (scheduled tasks are on paid plans). Running it yourself works without scheduling.

HOW IT WORKS

Prompt 1 reads your last 24 hours of email and today's calendar and writes a one-minute brief. Prompt 2 goes back 14 days and lists everything still waiting on a reply. Claude only reads, and writes drafts in the chat. Nothing is sent unless you say so.

THE STEPS

1 Connect Gmail + Google Calendar

2 Paste Prompt 1: the morning brief

3 Paste Prompt 2: the follow-up list

4 Make it automatic: every weekday morning (Pro)

1 Connect Gmail and Google Calendar

In Claude, open Customize → Connectors (claude.ai/customize/connectors) → Gmail → Connect → sign in with Google. Do the same for Google Calendar, with the same Google account. If you link two accounts, your brief mixes them up.

2 Check they're on in your chat

Start a new chat → tap + → Connectors → make sure Gmail and Google Calendar are switched on. If they're off, Claude can't see your email or calendar.

WHAT CLAUDE CAN AND CAN'T DO HERE

It can read your email and calendar, and it can write drafts. Claude's Gmail connector can send email, but it asks for your approval before every send by default, and both prompts tell it not to send anything. To cut access, disconnect it in Customize → Connectors. (Google Workspace connectors help)

The morning brief

Paste it into a new chat each morning, or schedule it (last step).

PROMPT 1 · COPY ALL OF IT

Be my morning brief. Use my Gmail and Google Calendar. Read first, then write; don't ask me anything yet.

1. Calendar: everything today, plus tomorrow before 11 am.
2. Email: the last 24 hours. Skip anything automated (newsletters, promotions, job alerts, receipts, no-reply senders, app notifications), even if Gmail marked it important.

Then write my brief, short enough to read on my phone in one minute:

☀️ THE ONE THING: the single most important thing today, and why,
in one line.
📅 TODAY: each event as time · what · who. Add prep only if the invite or an email asks for it. Flag clashes.
✉️ NEEDS A REPLY: up to 5 emails, most important first: who · what they want · by when. Under each, a reply I can copy in my voice: short, friendly, first person, under 60 words. If it needs a decision from me (money, dates, yes or no), ask me that one question instead of deciding.
⏰ DEADLINES: every date or deadline in my email for the next
7 days.
📦 CAN WAIT: one line counting the rest, e.g. "6 newsletters,
3 receipts".

Rules: use only what's in my email and calendar; never guess.
Keep bank, health, legal and family details out; just write
"1 personal email to check". Don't send, delete, accept or decline anything.

WHAT I GOT

My brief, from my real inbox

The run in my reel (22 Oct 2026), with the screen-sharing line on, so it used roles instead of names.

☀️ ONE THING	a brand campaign script due Oct 24, the one deal I've signed
📅 TODAY	my calendar blocks plus an evening event, no clashes
✉️ 1 REPLY	an agency asking my rate: it asked me the money question and left [rate] in the draft
⏰ DEADLINE	the Oct 24 script, pulled out of a long email thread
🗂️ CAN WAIT	10 app notifications, 7 promotions, 6 newsletters, 5 invites, 4 job alerts: one line

Plus 4 brand threads where I'd replied and the agency owed me an answer. It reads in under a minute.

WHY THE RULES ARE IN THE PROMPT

My first version let LinkedIn job alerts crowd the list (Gmail marks them important), and it agreed to payment terms for me in a draft. The "skip anything automated" and "ask me that one question" lines fixed both.

PROMPT 2

The follow-up list

Paste it in the same chat, right after your brief.

Now make my follow-up list from the last 14 days of my Gmail.

Find:
1. Emails I sent that never got a reply, where I was expecting one.
2. Things I promised ("I'll send", "I'll get back to you", "let me check") and haven't done yet.
3. Emails people sent me that are still unanswered and still matter.

For each one: who · what it's about · days waiting · a short nudge I can copy, in my voice. Sort by what costs me most if I forget it. Max 10. Skip automated emails and anything personal.
Don't send anything.

WHAT IT FOUND FOR ME

14	brand threads still waiting on a reply, 2 to 8 days old
2	promises I'd made and not finished
0	personal emails in the list: it left those out, as asked

STEP 4

Make it automatic

4 Schedule it for every weekday morning

On a paid plan (Pro or Max), Claude can run a prompt on a schedule: in a chat, set up a scheduled task, paste Prompt 1, pick Weekdays and a time like 8:00. It runs in the cloud even when your laptop is asleep, and you find the brief under Scheduled in the sidebar. (Scheduled tasks help)

MAKE IT YOURS

FREELANCER?	add: "Also list invoices I'm owed and revision requests from clients."
HINDI / HINGLISH	add: "Write the drafts in Hinglish, the way I text."
SAVE THE DRAFTS	after the brief, say: "Save replies 1 and 3 as Gmail drafts." They wait in your Drafts; nothing is sent.
SHARING YOUR SCREEN?	add: "For this run, use roles instead of names (a brand agency, a client), and leave out every amount and email address."

BE HONEST ABOUT IT

This isn't Duet

Claude Duet is Anthropic's own app, and it does more. Here's the difference, from Anthropic's Duet page and its help centre, checked 22 Oct 2026.

CLAUDE DUET	messages you first, checks your apps every few hours, works on its own cloud computer, asks before it sends, pays, signs or deletes
WHO GETS DUET	US only, Pro and Max, by waitlist (a research preview). No date for other countries yet
MY BRIEF	runs when you paste it, or once a morning on a schedule (Pro). It doesn't watch your inbox all day
WHO GETS MINE	anyone with Claude and Gmail, in any supported country. Your usage limits apply, same as Duet

Enjoy your first brief

One minute of reading instead of a morning in your inbox.
